Change Font Color For Replies In Outlook App Mac

My advice to you: If it is that important to you for your recipients to receive your email masterpieces in all their formatted glory, then send them as attachments in PDF format.. My advice to you: If it is that important to you for your recipients to receive your email masterpieces in all their formatted glory, then send them as attachments in PDF format.. They end up a quivering blob of failure Your best hope to have your recipients receive messages with formatting 'intact' is to send HTML mail.. Click to expand There are other threads on this topic For this reason, I was reluctant to jump in here.. However, the recipient controls HTML rendering Many Internet users dislike HTML mail--a lot.. This allowed ASCII art Today, ASCII art no longer works because most email clients default to a proportional font.. While I use mac mail I think it could do better

I wish they would have people that speak english well, as it makes it difficult to understand otherwise.. I often receive mail in business from someone that has responded to my forwarded mail by adding highlighted text to the content and that email when I receive it losses its side margins and the text on both sides are cut short.. I have to say however that I don't control how I see other people's email when they send it to me (ie I haven't changed anything from mail's default settings).. Now get this: The formatting of email is controlled by the recipient, not the sender.. They end up a quivering blob of failure Your best hope to have your recipients receive messages with formatting 'intact' is to send HTML mail.. Many people waste an awful lot of time trying to figure out how to force their recipients to receive their layout masterpieces.. It can be changed on the fly, when composing a message but i knew that already So that was a waste of 1 hour on the phone.

And no I don't think that the recipient chose to have my email displayed as such, they replied in much more elegant Calibri at a standard size (10 or 12 I guess).. I get emails in all sorts of different fonts, calibri, arial, helvetica etc which is obviously because they have set their preferred font in outlook or whatever it is they send email with.. Click to expand Thanks for this advice, I didn't manage to find anything like it on any of the other posts.. Well after spending 37 min on hold with apple care, finally getting someone to answer, then got a arab guy that was very hard to understand.. Apparently, you have taken for granted the proprietary features of Outlook Messages received by Outlook will probably look like messages sent by Outlook.. Anyway, after 37 min on hold, and then trying to understand what he was saying for another 23 minutes, come to find out there is no way to change the default font color permanently.. However, the recipient controls HTML rendering Many Internet users dislike HTML mail--a lot.. There are other threads on this topic Free app for mac For this reason, I was reluctant to jump in here.. This sometimes leads to receiver not seeing the response and disregarding it Many people waste an awful lot of time trying to figure out how to force their recipients to receive their layout masterpieces.

how do i change the color of my reply text in outlook

As far a receiving mail using mac mail from other mail applications I do think mac mail falls short sometimes.. I know these emails are coming from PC users The same emails are fine in Entourage on my mac.. This is using html email (as I have just checked) which I have never had a problem with, what do people dislike about it? And why can't Mail perform this simple task?Note that I'm not fussed about creating a 'masterpiece' or send email in 'all its formatted glory', but I do not want my email being sent in size 16 Times New Bldy Roman.. Click to expand When God gave Man email, he gave us 7-bit ASCII text Many fundamentalists believe that it is waste of resources and an imposition to add the crap that people like to include in email.. Font size is ridicluously small into a Mail response generated from Boxer and the reply is misplaced into the e-mail body.. In fact, 7-bit ASCII is the only format that is guaranteed to work on all email clients.

I agree with both sides of this discussion, and with that said it would be nice for a simple font format option for outgoing mail regardless of the higher way of viewing the subject.. Now get this: The formatting of email is controlled by the recipient, not the sender.. This is not uncommon At work we use outlook and are advised that company emails should be sent in Arial size 10 font, for the sake of uniformity.. Good discussion I was looking for this information as well and find this thread useful.. However, formatting across email clients may not be communicated intact Back in the days before email clients supported composition formatting, email was assumed to be 7-bit ASCII displayed in a monospaced font. d70b09c2d4
